

A map of Europe and surrounding regions (North Africa, Middle East) illustrating population density over time, from 800 BC to 1200 AD. The map uses a color scale where blue indicates low density and red/yellow indicates high density. Major cities are labeled in their respective languages, including London, Paris, Rome, Athens, and Constantinople. The map shows a significant increase in population density across the entire region during the period shown.